The seats are number 20 and 21. They are aisle seats next to section 105 but I don't remember the row. The man I got them from said that the row is high enough to see the entire field and with the aisle next to seat 21, there is extra unobstructed viewing space. If you look on-line at stadium seating chart, section 104 is on the Patriots side of the field.

I'm guessing that we will be going to RI on Sunday, but I'm not sure if it will be in the morning or afternoon/evening. Since Monday is a holiday, I'm figuring that we will be spending Sunday night/Monday morning at your house (if that is okay). I hadn't thought about Christmas Eve being a Saturday and that we would have papers that night, but I don't think that that would change any plans due to NY as I don't expect them to move their celebration (people already have other plans for Sunday). I'll talk with Nikki and see if she's thinking the same thing.

Thanks for getting the Pats tickets. I believe that you said they were in section 104, but I don't remember the seat numbers. Do you know them off the top of your head? Thanks.

Love,
Sonja

Good Morning Sonja,

I want to let you know that I did get the Patriots tickets.

Also, please let me know what your plans are for Christmas. I am also assuming that you and Nikki will be coming here sometime during the holiday weekend. Just let me know so I can plan my cooking. Since Christmas is on a Sunday and Monday the 26th is a holiday, I'm assuming you have the day off. If I remember correctly, you and Nikki usually go to New York for Christmas Eve, however, the papers may affect your normal plans.

Love,
Mom
